

"BENDS" VICTIM FALLS TO DEATH ON "L" TRACKS

Victim of Tunnel Disease Could Not Drag Himself to Safety.

John Hilbert, twenty-four years old, fell from the platform of the Third Avenue Elevated Railroad early to-day, while suffering with the calsom disease, or "bends," and while struggling to draw his writhing form from the tracks was struck by a northbound train and instantly ground to death under the wheels.

Hilbert lived at No. 2206 Thoburn avenue, the Bronx, and was on his way home from the Belmont tunnel, where he had been employed and where he had been treated at the Emergency Hospital, when he was killed.

Hilbert was identified by a card in his pocket, which showed he was a worker, No. 123 at the Belmont tunnel, and that he had been treated at the tunnel hospital by Dr. McCord.
